CARRIE FISHER & DAVE KERPEN

JULY 8, 2006

BROOKLYN

REALITY SHOWS & RELOCATION Dave Kerpen was the top salesman at Radio Disney Boston until Carrie Fisher trumped him in October 2001. Fisher moved to New York in May 2002, but what might have been a rivalry the likes of the Yankees and the Red Sox became a close friendship. Kerpen appeared on the Fox reality show "Paradise Hotel," and began his own company before moving to New York and asking Fisher to lunch.

PERFECT PITCH Though the pair had a very private engagement, the wedding was anything but. Following a Brooklyn Cyclones game last weekend, the couple got hitched at KeySpan Park. "We had gone on a date to the Cyclones game and loved the intimate, almost romantic, small-town feel to it," the groom says. "We both have a marketing background and decided to pitch the G.M. The whole game was themed around our wedding."

OUT OF THE BALLPARK The first 2,500 people to arrive at the park for the game received "Dave & Carrie" bobblehead dolls — courtesy of Broadway Mall — as favors. A bridesmaid sang the national anthem and the father of the bride and mother of the groom threw out the opening pitch. The couple, both 29, donned matching "Our Field of Dreams" T-shirts and changed — during the seventh inning stretch, natch — into formalwear. Nearly 500 invited guests headed to the practice field for the reception; the rest headed to the official after-party at Peggy O'Neill's. In the process of finding corporate sponsors for their nuptials, the newlyweds raised more than $20,000 for the David Wright Foundation.
